4-13-1998

The Advocate

The Advocate, Fordham Law School

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.lawnet.fordham.edu/student_the_advocate

Part of the Law Commons

Recommended Citation

http://ir.lawnet.fordham.edu/student_the_advocate/4

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Publications at FLASH: The Fordham Law Archive of Scholarship and History. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Advocate by an authorized administrator of FLASH: The Fordham Law Archive of Scholarship and History. For more information, please contact tmelnick@law.fordham.edu.
Dean Reilly And The Alumni Affairs Office

by Robert Cowhey '99

Dean Robert J. Reilly, class of '75 has been the Assistant Dean of Alumni Affairs since 1994. You've probably met him and wondered how he already knew your name. Don't forget every student Dean Reilly encounters is an alumni-to-be. Believe it or not you will probably develop stronger affections for Fordham once you've crossed the walk at Avery Fisher Hall.

In addition to Dean Reilly, the Alumni office includes Assistant Director of Alumni Affairs Bernadette Dormer, Director of Communications, Minne Hong, assisted by Robert Cooper, and Helen Herman, Director of the Office of Academic Programs (which encompasses all of the co-curricular and professional conferences and the Office of Continuing Legal Education).

Not only does the Alumni office reach out to graduates, but many seek to remain active in the life of the school and to maintain contact with Fordham people in their professional lives. The Office of Alumni Affairs allows them to do both. Continuing Legal Education Programs are also handled by Alumni Affairs. Every week there are advanced legal subjects being covered in the McNally Amphitheater and Fordham alumni are often in attendance. Some events are live, others are received via satellite from Chicago.

For seven years Dean Reilly was simultaneously Dean of Students and Director of Alumni Affairs. In light of the school's tremendous Alumni involvement, it became clear in 1994 that a separate Dean of Alumni Affairs was needed. Fordham remains unusual among law schools in the loyalty and support of its graduates. In fact, we're in the top ten in terms of total alumni financial contributions as well as percentage of alumni donors in the nation and number one among Jesuit schools.

When asked what he liked most about his job, Dean Reilly responded that because of the warmth and affection graduates have for the school, wherever he goes, he is treated like an old friend. Dean Reilly gives a lot of credit to Dean Feerick for the strength of alumni ties. Notably, where most law school deans only remain in the position for an average period of three years, Dean Feerick is the fourth longest serving Dean in the country, having served sixteen years; and Fordham in the past forty years has had only three Deans. Dean Reilly stresses that this continuity provides a common point of reference for many alumni.

Maintaining the positive relationship between the school and its graduates is a task the Alumni Office takes very seriously. There are several major events each year for law school Alumni, starting with Dean's Day in the fall, which is a kind of law school homecoming. One of the most significant events is the annual Alumni luncheon held at the Waldorf Astoria the first Saturday in March, which is the largest regularly scheduled alumni event among all U.S. law schools. The luncheon attracts almost 1,000 Fordham alumni. During the following weeks, special alumni programs include events for graduates celebrating their 5th, 10th, 15th, 20th and 25th anniversaries. There are also combined occasions for graduates celebrating their 30th & 35th and 40th & 45th anniversaries. The office tries to cover everyone.

In April, student organization alumni events strengthen the interaction between Alumni and the current Fordham Law student body. In June, the Alumni Golf and Tennis Tournament is held to raise scholarship money, and there's also a big Christmas holiday party in December. Throughout the year, there are smaller events for regional Alumni associations around the country and around the world. This year Fordham's LLM graduates will gather in Paris for a combination reunion and celebration of the program's tenth anniversary.

"As long as you're talking and listening to students they can endure almost any bumps in the road, which has a continuing effect."

Alumni come back to judge moot court events, act as advisors for clinical programs and journals, speak at career planning events and also as featured speakers for conferences. The Alumni also play a significant role in Fordham's famous Student Sponsored Fellowship Goods and Services Auction, the proceeds from which provide as many as forty fellowships to students who work in public interest fields during the summer. For example, alumna Jennifer Mone '93 baked "Wonder Bread," Irish soda bread, which sold for $10,000. The auction is the largest of its kind in the country. As expected, Dean Reilly's schedule includes many working breakfast and dinner engagements in addition to the enormous amount of school functions he's required to attend. So I asked him if he had time for any outside interests. Believe it or not, he does! Earlier this semester he competed in an indoor triathlon. (Yes, that's right, a triathlon!) Last year he completed training as a "Highlights Tour Guide at the American Museum of Natural History". The training included several months of intensive classroom study, culminating in two three-hour oral examinations. The tours are given twice a month and have received rave reviews from the several Fordham student groups he has taken on these mini-adventures. He also donated a tour to the auction, which sold for $1,000.

The Fordham Alumni philosophy is that good Alumni relations begin from orientation, in the first year, straight through graduation, and beyond. Dean Reilly says, "As long as you're talking and listening to students, they can endure almost any bumps in the road, which has a continuing effect." So what can you expect when you graduate? You'll have the opportunity to become involved in a host of activities — judging a competition, speaking at a career dinner, or contributing to the auction, just to name a few. Basically as an alum, you can do many of the things you didn't have time to do as a student. Whatever you decide your involvement level will be, look forward to a great deal of mail from Dean Reilly.
In a salute to the graduates of '98, this issue was published perilously close to finals. I'd like to especially thank Ilona Stanley and Rob Cowhey for their extra effort with this Advocate.

As we near graduation, I am nostalgic. No, I'm not a member of the class of '98, but nonetheless I feel some sense of loss. Over the past two years I've forged bonding relationships with a fair number of the soon-to-be-graduates. Among them are the former editor of these pages, Moot Court Editors, SBA Officers, and BLSA members.

But graduations always make me feel emotional. The Spring in general is an introspective period—Spring Cleaning, Spring TV Cliffhangers, Spring Flings, Spring Breaks, and at Fordham Spring Alumni dinners. This is the time of year we evaluate whether we've accomplished at least half of the goals we set out to accomplish. Concerns about whether we've properly prepared for our summer jobs and internships are rampant right about now. For the graduating students many are probably wondering whether a significant mark was left that "We were here." Will the good we've done matter to anyone while we're at the firm, in Judge's chambers or at the D.A.'s office? Let me be the first to say: You won't be forgotten. I have the fruits of your ideas and efforts, your outlines and books, and the memory of your smiling encouragements to comfort and guide me in my remaining years at Fordham. So THANKS TO ALL OF YOU.

THE ADVOCATE
Maria C. John
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Amy Fahey / Kenny Rios
MANAGING EDITORS

Ayako Nagano
TECHNICAL EDITOR

Matthew Paulose
SENIOR STAFF WRITER

Ilona Stanley
ARTICLES EDITOR

R. T.B. Cowhey
LAYOUT EDITOR

Kenneth P. Persing
EDITOR EMERITUS

The Advocate is the official student newspaper of Fordham Law School. The goal of The Advocate is to report news concerning the Fordham Law School community and development in the legal profession. The Advocate also serves as a forum for opinions and ideas of members of the law school community. The Advocate does not necessarily concur with opinions expressed herein, and is not responsible for opinions of individual authors or for factual errors in contributions received. Submissions should be made on disk in MS Word (any version) or Word Perfect 5.1. We reserve the right to edit for length and grammar. Advertising rates available upon request. Contributions are tax deductible.

THE ADVOCATE
Fordham University School of Law
140 W. 62nd Street
New York, New York 10023
(212) 636-6964

DO YOU HAVE TOO MUCH TIME ON YOUR HANDBS?

Do you have no consideration for contracts?

Do you feel like abandoning Civil Procedure for failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted?

Do you simply own no property and therefore see no reason for studying it?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, then The Advocate can use you.

If you are interested in writing for the official Student Newspaper of Fordham Law School, please stop by Room 26 in the cafeteria level or contact us at 636-6964.

Volume II No. 7

Ruth Whitehead Whaley Award Dinner and Symposium
End of Fall '98 Registration.
21st (Tuesday) Fordham Law Review Dinner
22nd (Wednesday) Student Leadewrs' Meeting.

Spring 18th-19th (Saturday and Sunday) Black Law Students Association 20th Anniversary

Spring 16th (Thursday) Fall '98 Registration for LD2s.

Spring 17th (Friday) Fall '98 Registration for LE2s.

Ruth Whitehead Whaley Award Dinner and Symposium
End of Fall '98 Registration.
21st (Tuesday) Fordham Law Review Dinner
22nd (Wednesday) Student Leadewrs' Meeting.

Spring 18th-19th (Saturday and Sunday) Black Law Students Association 20th Anniversary

Spring 16th (Thursday) Fall '98 Registration for LD2s.

Spring 17th (Friday) Fall '98 Registration for LE2s.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF 1998!!!

DO YOU HAVE TOO MUCH TIME ON YOUR HANDS?

Do you have no consideration for contracts?

Do you feel like abandoning Civil Procedure for failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted?

Do you simply own no property and therefore see no reason for studying it?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, then The Advocate can use you.

If you are interested in writing for the official Student Newspaper of Fordham Law School, please stop by Room 26 in the cafeteria level or contact us at 636-6964.

RAMblings Calendar

23rd (Thursday) Environmental Law Journal Dinner.
28th (Tuesday) "Judicial Efficiency: Is There a Vacancy Crisis Threatening the Nation's Judicial System?" 4:00pm, McNally, Reception to follow. 5:30 Unveiling of portrait of Thomas F. Murphy, sponsored by the Dean, ULJ and Gavel & Shield.
29th (Wednesday) Last Day of Classes: Friday schedule. Deadline for term and independent study papers.

May Events:
1st-3rd (Friday to Sunday) Reading Days

4th (Monday) Final exams for upper level students.
14th (Tuesday) Dean's reception for 1998 graduates.
16th (Saturday) Fordham University Commencement, Rose Hill Campus.
17th: (Sunday) Law School Diploma Ceremony: Avery Fisher Hall at 7:00 p.m.

Spring 18th-19th (Saturday and Sunday) Black Law Students Association 20th Anniversary

Spring 16th (Thursday) Fall '98 Registration for LD2s.

Spring 17th (Friday) Fall '98 Registration for LE2s.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF 1998!!!

DO YOU HAVE TOO MUCH TIME ON YOUR HANDS?

Do you have no consideration for contracts?

Do you feel like abandoning Civil Procedure for failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted?

Do you simply own no property and therefore see no reason for studying it?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, then The Advocate can use you.

If you are interested in writing for the official Student Newspaper of Fordham Law School, please stop by Room 26 in the cafeteria level or contact us at 636-6964.
RECORD BREAKER:
Fordham Student Sponsored Fellowship Auction

by Minne J.M. Hong

NEW YORK—Fordham University, School of Law’s Student Sponsored Fellowship (FSSF) program recently held the largest and most successful fund-raising event in its history, generating over $120,000 at the 7th Annual FSSF Goods and Services Auction. The proceeds from this year’s auction set a new all-time high record, breaking last year’s total of $115,000. The FSSF Goods and Services Auction is the largest and most successful student-run fundraising event of its kind, and has raised over $500,000 since its inception in 1992.

Over 500 attendees turned out for the event on March 4, 1998 and bid on 341 auction prizes (293 silent auction items and 48 live auction items). The live auction portion of the evening was led by art appraiser Harmer Johnson, formerly of Sotheby’s and Christie’s auction houses, and with guest auctioneers James Brown ’72 of Wilson Elser Moskowitz Edelman & Dicker and Michael Stanton ’59 of Weil, Gotshal & Manges.

Top prizes of the evening’s events were: “Wonder Bread,” Irish soda bread baked by alumna Jennifer Mone ’93 (sold for $10,000); “Vive la France,” a one-week stay for two at Domaine des Ormes, a 16th century chateau near Mont St. Michel in France (sold for $2,800); “Katch-Up with Katsoris,” an afternoon of barbecue hosted by The Agnes and Ignatius M. Wilkinson Professor of Law, Constantine N. Katsoris ’57 (two prizes sold for $2,550 and $2,500, respectively); “The People’s Lunch,” lunch at the 21 Club with former New York City mayor and current People’s Court judge, Ed Koch, and host, James F. Gill ’36 of Robinson Silverman Pearce (sold for $2,500); “The Man, The Myth, The Legend,” dinner and cigars with Wilkinson Professor of Law Constantine N. Katsoris ’57 (sold for $2,000); and “Austin Texas: International State of Mystery,” round trip tickets to Austin, TX and a one-week vacation stay at Horseshoe Bay condominium (sold for $1,750).

The proceeds from the FSSF Goods and Services Auction will fund approximately 40 summer fellowships to Fordham Law students working in the public sector. Among the public interest agencies and organizations where FSSF Fellows provide services are the Legal Aid Society, NAACP, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Office of the U.S. Attorney, Eastern District of New York.

Law Students Just Want To Have Fun: A Review of the 1998 Fordham Follies

by Maria C. John ’00

Who said law students have no life? The cast of Pulp Fordham aptly demonstrated otherwise. Directed by Dennis Cariello, John Galluccio, Bob Cosgrove and Donna Mulvihill, the show proved that almost anything can be made entertaining. In a creative and original tribute to the quirks, oddities and idiosyncrasies of students and administration alike, this year’s players danced, sang and amused the audience which packed the Pope auditorium.

The opening number, a song and dance intro tuned to Into the Woods, was beautifully choreographed. I was amazed at how defily the performers handled their steps, turns and twirls without missing a beat. The show’s loosely wound plot involved a student, presumably in some purgatory-type state, pleaded with an angel to be allowed into heaven. Unfortunately the angel must gently explain (through flashbacks of the student’s law school career) why she shouldn’t be allowed through the pearly gates.

The entire cast performed their parts with gusto and aplomb. Particular raves go to Brian Chiussen, whose “Mark Sherman” was hilarious. The Follies Mark Sherman sported “big hair” and was excessively neurotic over SBA’s budget and rules. This portrayal hit home with everyone in attendance, and no one laughed harder than the real Mark, who was in the crowd the night I attended.

What enjoyed most about this year’s Follies were the professor-portrayals. Not only were they incredibly on point, but they managed to mimic without being mean; and stay on the right side of the tactful. Lori Schaffhausen was terrific as the beer-bashing Dean Ecelers; and John Galluccio transformed Dean Feerick into a post-Spreewell-negotiation “homeboy”, that had everyone in stitches. Equally amusing were scenes with outline-study aids providers portrayed in drug-selling type fashion pushing everything from Contracts to Corporations; and the scene where four professors are at the beach exhibiting all of their bad sides.

I was also pleasantly surprised by the hidden talent these Fordham students have. The lead character, Donna Mulvihill, has a wonderful voice. The dancing of many of the skits was impressive (although you could clearly tell who had, and had not, received formal training). Overall, the agility and energy of the cast really set the tone for a great performance. To put it plainly the Fordham Follies was FUN, FUN, FUN!
BALANCING ACT:
Preschool and Posner

By Anonymous*

I’d like to get a hold of those lying upperclassmen who said second year would be a lot easier. Yet, really I have no one to blame but myself for my overcommitted schedule. Once again, despite my better judgment I need to prove to myself that I am that mythical 70s superwoman.

In the end I return to the mantra that maintains my sanity - Balance. Although time management enables me to meet my commitments, it is when I stop to reestablish my priorities that I am most successful.

I do not claim I went back to school for my kids sake. “If I have time to myself I’ll be a better mother.” I do it for me and I do not need to apologize to family value chest thumpers. I, like Matthew Eappen’s mother, have every right to meet my own needs. I spent three years at home with Huggies, Elmo and the Frugal Gourmet. I NEED MORE. My personal aspirations and need for intellectual stimulation did not cease when the epidural wore off. I do this for me, so that I will not ignore my other potentials. However, I ward off pangs of guilt by reminding myself that I always kept my eye on the true prize - not the A, not Law Review, but on Balance doing my personal best at meeting all my commitments to my family and to myself.

Yet, the questions that haunted me first year were: How do you keep balance when your classmates can spend a full day on their brief while you try to get in a few hours after the kids go to bed? Should I ship the kids off to my mother-in-law? Should I complain that it was easier for my husband in graduate school (after all he did not have to give up anything to pursue his career goals; while I felt compelled to give my full attention to my kids’ precious early development years)? Should I put them in an extended day care program so that I will have more hours in my day for promissory estoppel and Posner? Or should I ignore my classmates’ marathon sessions and stick to my schedule built around the kids’ day? Balance required that I do the latter.

Another student recently asked me if having children actually helped me to focus because I did not have the same distractions my single classmates have - bar hopping, dating, annoying roommates. I suppose being an old married lady did have that advantage. But, I often wonder if I missed a more important aspect of my education connecting with my colleagues.

In the past year and a half, I have given up my favorite authors, the Yankees, my Sundays with old boleros (Spanish ballads) and Piano Lessons for the Late Bloomer. Yet, I kept my priorities in the crosshairs. I was there for the kids when they got out of school, I changed their uniforms, heard about their day and shared a meal with them before running off to class. In October of my first year I moved in to care for my younger siblings when my mother had her heart attack. Priorities also made me leave the Contracts midterm an hour early to catch my son’s Christmas pageant. Luckily that grade was dropped.) And, on the morning of the Contracts final when my daughter had her first ballet recital I made the right decision - I saw the recital from start to finish.

When an entire year of hard work depends on one exam it would have been easy to lose perspective. The key was to set my own definition of success. For me success is balancing the law and my career as a mother.
Right around the time our first-year article was published in these very pages last semester, we were all wrapping up our long memo assignments and gearing up for Thanksgiving. The most pressing concern of first-years at that time, I felt, was the anarchy of the library. So that is what you all read about . . . Simple enough, right?
However, a more serious issue surfaced in the days leading up to the memo due date. Its salience is far from lost and its scope broad enough to affect every single student at Fordham and any other law school regardless of division or year.
Before we entered Fordham Law, we all signed a piece of paper agreeing to the terms of the honor code. Many of us came across similar policies at various undergraduate institutions. The idea is rooted in ethics, and it seemed more of an afterthought at this point in our lives. It barely garnered notice despite its important nature. (In fact, from speaking to classmates, many people do not recall this signature requirement at all.) Additionally those in attendance were treated to a lively discussion on the subject during orientation week in August. Granted, the message was a decidedly mixed one, but we got the general point: do not cheat or promulgate cheating in any way, shape, or form. No great shakes. The morality expected of us was, hopefully, already become ingrained in us prior to entering the great building on West Sixty-Second Street.
Why do I bring it up then? The last few days of November were a flurry of mad library dashes, conked-out first-years. It might have been tempting to sneak a peek at a previously-written long memo, log onto LEXIS or WestLaw after training, or even contact outside legal support (say, relatives or friends who have access to all sorts of wonderful research goodies). Believe it or not, we probably all had the opportunity to take advantage of these opportunities, to grow, to meet new people and concepts, to open doors, to adopt a new outlook, to explore exciting career opportunities. (In fact, from speaking to my classmates-most will mention my impeccable sense of good judgment—I felt drawn to this issue as the tail end of our year approaches and finals are at the door. It's a little something called the honor code.

It is important, therefore, to keep sight of the long-term goal and to keep that almighty honor code in mind. We are in law school to learn, to accept the proposition to, grow, to meet new people and concepts, to open doors, to adopt a new outlook, to explore exciting career options, to burn the midnight oil, to question, to become familiar with some intricacies of day-to-day life, to solve problems, to fashion policy, to espouse fresh ideas. None of that can be accomplished by wrongfully obtaining information and sneaking around tough research assignments. The higher standard we are confronted with as law students should not send us scampering for the easy way out. Instead, we should face the challenges head-on, expect to be severely frustrated by many things, and realize that grades are not the end-all. If you must, use the immortal words of Chumbawamba as your mantra: "I get knocked down, but I get up again!" As heavy-handedly righteous and cliched as it may sound, not only is cheating unfair to others, but it is robbing the teacher himsely/herself of an invaluable chance to learn. Be warned and be strong.

A less serious tone is needed in discussing a related sub-class of law school scammers: the scriptreaders. It is one thing to use "homemade" and commercial outlines to help explain confusing material, dissect issues, or organize classwork. The problem lies when otherwise clueless people pass themselves off as the next Learned Hand during class while using tailored outlines and scripts. The creative genius springs not from within, but from pre-packaged, spoofed information gleaned from years passed. Students who recite directquotes or ideas from a professor-specific script or outline in some sly attempt to impress a professor or to "fool" their classmates into believing they are speaking off the cuff are often easy to spot. The joke is that they do not realize a majority of the class is wise to the stunt and use the episodes as fodder for laughter during study group breaks, bar crawls, and late-night phone conversations. Cheating?
Possible. Dumb? Definitely. Refer who got through on outside assistance and other by shady means? As expected, the full 100% (-of the somewhat anonymous group—I could not pick most of them out of a line-up at this point) claimed they personally had not cheated, but had heard rumblings that at least one person in their respective Legal Writing sections had "helped" with their long memo assignments. But check with the Dean and you will discover that not one student was turned in for such behavior.

The higher standard we are confronted with as law students should not send us scampering for the easy way out.

Ten dollars. That's all it costs to be part of one of the best networking resources you'll ever have now and throughout your legal career — the New York State Bar Association.

In addition to joining more than 60,000 of New York state's most prestigious lawyers, judges, professors and law students, you get all these advantages:

- FREE admission to all Law Student Council programs
- FREE admission to NYSBA's Annual Meeting in January in New York City
- Discounts on most of TWENTY practice concentration sections
- Awards & competitions for legal writing advocacy and research
- Discounts on continuing legal education and practical skills seminars
- Choice of insurance plans
- Discounts from BAR/BRI Bar Review
- Guidance on pro bono opportunities
- Professional and personal money-saving discounts

YES, I want to join the New York State Bar Association. Enclosed is my check for $10.

MAIL TO: Membership Department
New York State Bar Association
One Elk Street, Albany, NY 12207
E-Mail: membership@nysba.org

NAME

STREET

CITY STATE ZIP

LAW SCHOOL

GRADUATION DATE

DATE OF BIRTH PHONE NUMBER

New York State Bar Association
Or, join on-line: http://www.nysba.org

Success has its price.

For law students, it's just $10 a year.
LAW STUDENTS WITH KIDS: THE DISNEY EXPERIENCE

by Janeen Jones

Over winter break MariaJohn and her son Brandon accompanied my son Julian and me to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Florida. Maria and I are both single parents and very good friends so teaming up to visit Walt Disney World was ideal. Needless to say we had a great time.

Maria and I divided the work. Maria made travel arrangements and I made the hotel and dining reservations.

I wanted the trip to be a success so I went to the library and researched Walt Disney World in preparation for our trip. The library has a huge selection of guides and other books written about Walt Disney World. I chose five guides and read through them. I believe that The Unofficial Guide To Walt Disney World by Bob Sehlinger was the best for planning activities and dining for families with children. However, Fodor's Guide To Walt Disney World For Adults, by Rita Aero is the best when planning activities and dining for adults or couples. I used The Unofficial Guide To Walt Disney World to plan our trip. I found this guide to be quite accurate, and I would recommend it for any family planning a Disney vacation.

Maria and I decided to stay at one of the Disney Resorts. There are a lot of advantages to staying at a Disney resort. Besides theme parks, there are early entry privileges to all resort public may enter). This is great for small children who have never flown, because it's short enough for them not to get bored and long enough for them to enjoy.

We left for Walt Disney World on New Years day. This was Julian's first time on an airplane. Of course he looked out the window the entire flight. Julian still has not stopped talking about flying through the clouds. The flight to Orlando is great for small children who have never flown, because it's short enough for them not to get bored and long enough for them to enjoy.

and The Polynesian. I decided that we would stay at a moderate resort. Disney has four moderate resorts, Coronado Springs, Dixie Landings, Caribbean Beach and The Port Orleans. I chose The Port Orleans, which is Disney's New Orleans themed resort. It was ideal because it's quaint and it has a water slide pool shaped like a dragon. I thought the boys would love the pool, and they did.

While doing my research on Walt Disney World I learned a lot about this vacation spot that I never knew. Did you know Disney has a Wedding Pavilion and people actually go there for their honeymoon? I have always just thought of Disney World as a place you take your children. However, after visiting Disney World I could definitely see why people would honeymoon there. The Disney Resorts are fabulous. During our stay we were able to visit a few of the other resorts. One, the Polynesian, has the feel of a Hawaiian Island. Maria and I took the boys to Mickey's Tropical Luau a dinner show, held at the Polynesian. They served traditional Hawaiian food and in addition to Disney characters, Hawaiian dancers were also a part of the show. All of the Disney resorts are themed, so there is a special feeling you get when you visit the resort. What is nice about this is you can have the feeling you’re some place special (like Hawaii) and also get to enjoy all of the fun of Disney. I would definitely do a Disney honeymoon.

Walt Disney World was ideal for any family planning a Disney vacation.
The lender that helps you bring order to all your law students' financial needs.

Finding the right financing for your law students doesn't have to be a trial. Not when you rely on Key Education Resources. We offer a full range of education financing products, making it easy to help students earn their degrees. Call our School Administrator Hotline today. We're certain you'll return a favorable verdict.

1-800-540-1855
www.keybank.com/educate WISHES YOU
GOOD LUCK ON YOUR FINAL EXAMS

1500 Broadway, New York, NY 10036 • (212)719-0200 • (800)472-8899