ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Our deepest gratitude goes to Carole Zabar, Esq., for her generosity, which made this Conference possible, for her dedication to social justice issues, and for her invaluable contributions to the Interdisciplinary Center.

We give special thanks to Deans Nancy A. Busch (Graduate School of Arts and Sciences), John D. Feerick (School of Law), and Peter B. Vaughan (Graduate School of Social Service) for their belief in the importance of this Conference and in the potential for interdisciplinary collaboration between the schools. We also give special thanks to Professor Thomas Quinn for helping to turn the concept of this Conference into a reality.

We thank all of the Conference planning participants for the time and energy they gave to this event. All planning participants are identified in the list of Conference participants, which follows the Conference materials published in this journal. We give special thanks to Annette DePalma for all the work she put forth in organizing the Conference on behalf of the Louis Stein Center for Law and Ethics, Hank Orenstein and Monica Drinane who were among the initial supporters of the Conference, Beth Harrow, Caroline Kearney, Edith Holzer and Hank Orenstein for their special contributions to planning the days' events, Professor Lyn Slater, Lyn Vogelstein, Beth Harrow and Deirdre O'Sullivan for their work on the parents panel, Professor Ann Higgins D'Alessandro for her work to include the psychology community, Harriet Weinberger, Katherine Law and Nancy Matles for their support from the Law Guardian Panels, Nancy Thomson from the ACS Division for Legal Services for ensuring ACS involvement in the Conference, Professor Jane Spinak, Nanette Schorr, Professor Paula Galowitz, and Sue Jacobs for their ongoing advice and counsel, Barbara DeMayo for her help involving the family court judiciary, Professor Dorothy Roberts for her inspiring keynote speech, the working group facilitators, reporters and secretaries, and the working group report editors. We also pay special tribute to the parents who participated in organizing this Conference for their efforts on behalf of all parents involved with the child welfare system. Last but not least, we thank Aimee Campbell, M.C. Sweeney-Kwok, Helen Herman and David Quiles for their dedication to planning this Conference, and the Fordham Law Review editors and staff for their work in making this publication a reality.
