New York, New York

Dear John:

Congratulations on your excellent article in the current issue of the Fordham Law Review. The article shows scholarship and research of the highest order. Too many of our Law Review people forget about scholarly contributions to the Review after graduation and therefore I was delighted to see your very fine piece.

My only quibble with your conclusions is point 5 on Page 128 giving the right to the President to declare a cessation of the inability. Query: Do you mean the Vice President or the former President. If you mean the latter, it would seem to me that problems could be created.

In any event, my best wishes to you and yours.

Sincerely,

William Hughes Mulligan
Dean
