As you know, SSRN is an open access research platform owned by the publisher Elsevier and used by scholars in many academic fields to share research and connect with one another around the world. SSRN enjoys extensive participation by legal scholars. Fordham Law faculty members can submit material to SSRN directly or can work with Carlie McCarthy of the Maloney Library, the law school's Working Paper Coordinator. Articles uploaded to SSRN by Fordham faculty members are included in The Fordham Law School Legal Studies Research Paper Series to which other scholars can subscribe.

Submitting your work to SSRN is an excellent way to increase the exposure and influence of your work within the community of legal scholars. Here are some of the benefits:

- Increased Exposure/Visibility – New scholarship uploaded by Fordham faculty members is searchable within SSRN and is also findable via Google and Google Scholar. It is also added to The Fordham Law School Legal Studies Research Paper Series and to subject matter eJournals which are distributed to thousands of subscribers.

- Expanded Brand Recognition – Research submitted by Fordham Law faculty is showcased on a customized page with the law school's name and logo, distributed in a similarly customized eJournal.

- Strengthened Reputation – SSRN is a great way to build your individual reputation and that of Fordham Law School. Authors and institutions are ranked on several metrics, most notably the number of downloads. The more often your papers are downloaded, the more highly ranked you and Fordham become on SSRN.

Please contact Carlie McCarthy at cmccarthy@law.fordham.edu or 212-636-6904.

SSRN Tips

- Expand the reach of your article through subject matter ejournals. Authors can select up to 12 ejournals for distribution that span a wide variety of areas, from Administrative Law to Criminal Law Policy to Law & Society and many others.

- Keywords and JEL codes: SSRN’s search engine is optimized to search on keywords and JELs (for economic papers).

- Faculty SSRN profile & bio page: Add a link to your SSRN author page in your email signature (on ‘My Papers’ page there is a link to view suggested email signature) and also link your Fordham faculty bio page to your SSRN author profile.
