In May of 1984 The Multinational Monitor and Mother Jones magazine presented a great deal of evidence that between 1978 and 1980, that Bechtel, the giant San Francisco based construction company violated the 1978 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act by bribing South Korean officials in order to obtain nuclear construction contracts. These reports reveal that Bechtel Company officials have been convicted of bribery before, and little attention has been paid to that fact. What makes this case particularly explosive is that Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger and Secretary of State George Schultz were working as top executives for Bechtel at the time of the alleged violations. Both were in positions to know about them. Korea Electric Power Co. has placed major orders for its rapid expansion of nuclear electric power through the Bechtel Corporation.
