Three New Profs Join Fordham Ranks

EUGENE W. HARPER

GAIL HOLLISTER

MAXIMILIAN J.B. WELKER

by Kevin Crozier
and Marshall Donat

Three new professors joined Fordham's full-time teaching ranks this fall. All three—two of whom are Fordham alumni—have begun teaching first-year courses this semester.

Professor Maximilian J.B. Welker has been appointed to a one-year visiting professorship for the 1977-78 academic year. This semester Welker will teach Property, and he will offer courses on Jurisprudence and Landlord and Tenant in the spring.

Welker, a 1972 graduate of Fordham Law School, typifies the background the Faculty Search Committee looks for in an applicant—practical experience combined with academic success.

While a student, Welker was a Commentary Editor for the Law Review. He then spent two years in the Estates and Trusts department of White and Case, and earned an LL.M. from New York University in 1975.

After leaving White and Case, Welker began his teaching career at Seton Hall Law School in Newark, New Jersey. He is now on leave from a teaching position at the University of Puget Sound.

Welker did his undergraduate work at Columbia College, where he majored in English. His major, he recalls, "provided a very sensible background for the study of law."

Professor Eugene W. Harper, Jr. has assumed the task of teaching all section of Criminal Law for the first-year classes. A graduate of Fordham College and Virginia Law School, Harper comes to Fordham from a position at Webster, Sheffield, Hawkins, Dellfield & Wood.

"I left Webster because I always wanted to teach law," Harper said. In his five years of practice he specialized in

McLaughlin Honored at Alumni Fete

Dean Joseph McLaughlin was honored for his years of service to Fordham Law School at a reception last Tuesday sponsored by the Law School Alumni Association.

Alumni president John Feerick presented the Dean with an inscribed silver platter following cocktails in the Empire Room of the Waldorf-Astoria. Among those who spoke in tribute to McLaughlin were New York State Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz, a Fordham alumnus, and Fordham's Professor Joseph Crowley.

In receiving the alumni testimonial, ostensibly for fifteen years of service to the school, McLaughlin quickly objected so that the record would show he had, in fact, served sixteen years.

About three hundred alumni, as well as the Dean's family, attended the reception.

McLaughlin joined the Fordham faculty in 1961 after two years with the firm of Cahil Gordon & Reindel. In 1971, he became the youngest law school dean in the United States when he was selected to head the Fordham faculty.

Two Students Top Field In Mulligan Competition

by Walter K. Donat

Final rounds of the Mulligan Moot Court Competition were held on July 28, with first and second place awarded to Florence Fass 2A and Mark Goodman 2E respectively.

Over ninety students participated in this annual competition.

The topics for argument were the exclusion of evidence and living witness rules. The problem considered whether testimonial evidence obtained as the result of an illegal search by a federal agent should be suppressed in a subsequent trial for perjury.

Elizabeth P. Walters was selected this summer to succeed Leslie Goldman as Placement Director of the Law School.

Walters began her new job June 1 after a screening process consisting of three separate interviews. The interviews were conducted by student representatives, administration officials, faculty and alumni.

The new director has a B.A. in English Education from Hunter College and an extensive background in business and counseling.

Prior to accepting Fordham's job offer, Walters applied for positions in personnel departments of various companies. She ultimately chose Fordham because it offered her a "challenge to use her talents and creativity" in finding new jobs for students, as well as developing the marketability of the Fordham law student to prospective employers.

Her goal is twofold: to place more students in jobs, and to convince potential recruiters that Fordham students are as sharp and competitive as those from the nationally-known law schools.

Walters wants to promote the marketability concept in two ways. First, she feels alumni are a vital resource and should be utilized as much as possible for finding more jobs. She says this is already being done, as the number of firms recruiting on campus has increased by about 25 per cent this year. This is due somewhat to strengthened lines of communication between the Placement Office and the Alumni Office which is headed by Frances M. Blake, who serves in a dual capacity as the Executive Director of Placement and Alumni Affairs.

Second, the Alumni/Placement Committee is preparing a brochure which will be mailed to large corporations to persuade them to seek out and hire Fordham students. This is intended to enhance the image of the Fordham law student and ultimately increase the number of job recruiters.

The Placement Director also plans to compile a complete list of corporations hiring lawyers—a Martindale-Hubbell type of directory listing only medium and small size firms—and her own monthly newsletter.

She has described the Administration as being "very helpful." She notes that the Placement Center's facilities have greatly improved over the last year. Part-time help is being used to prepare and gather materials and information useful to all students seeking any type of position in any type of firm, company or agency.

Walters describes her relationship with the students as being "very nice and open." She notes that despite all the pessimism about job prospects for graduating law students, our students have been doing fairly well. Placement Office information sent to all incoming Freshmen revealed the following: "Based on responses to Placement Office questionnaires by 1974, 1975 and 1976 graduates of the Law

Phi Alpha Delta Initiates Judge As Honorary

Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity International has announced the initiation of two judges of the International Court of Justice to their ranks.

Judge Eduardo Gimenez de Arechaga will be initiated by Fordham's Wormser Chapter, and will become one of its members. Judge Manfred Lachs will be initiated by the Patterson Chapter of Seton Hall School of Law in Newark.

The Fordham chapter also bestowed an honorary membership last May on Bradford Morse, administrator of the United Nations Development Program.

A reception in honor of the two judges was held at the Biltmore Hotel on September 24.

The Advocate is the student newspaper of the Fordham University School of Law, published by and for the students biweekly during the school year. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the Editor-in-Chief, and do not necessarily reflect those of the University, the School, the students or individual members of the staff. Communications may be addressed to The Advocate, Fordham University School of Law, Room 048A, 140 West 62nd Street, New York City 10023. Advertising inquiries should be addressed to the Business Manager. Letters to the Editor, preferably typed, are welcome.

Presidential Corner

Plans Underway

Classes have begun and I would like to take this opportunity to welcome all new students and say hello again to those who have returned for another fun-filled year. This year the Student Bar Association can promise more than Tangs. During the summer the SBA prepared plans for this year.

The placement office is finally functioning efficiently. Elizabeth Walters has organized the office. Students from the SBA Placement Committee are working on compiling a list of corporations with an eye to an eventual mailing to these corporations to invite them to interview on campus. Students are now involved with Placement activities. Any student who has some free time should stop by the placement office to aid in the creation of a mini-Martindale of small and medium size firms.

The SBA is planning a Big Brother/Sister program between first year students and upperclassmen. All upperclassmen interested in participating should give their name to their class officers by September 16th.

The intermural sports have begun. Students interested in playing football should contact Bruce Birns. Bruce will also run the basketball intermurals later in the year. Those interested in starting a tennis intermural should leave their name on the list posted in the SBA office.

A Tang is being planned for the end of September to be followed by a dance in Lowenstein sometime in early October. If you can help out please contact Laura Ward, Jack Hicks or Beth Barrett.

The Law Forum, our speaker program, is scheduled to begin offering lectures in October. The theme for this semester is Alternative Lawyering—Alternatives to Big Firm Practice.

The SBA is trying to arrange student parking rates with the Lincoln Center Garage. All interested students should sign up on the list posted in the SBA office. This sign up will not be a commitment it will merely give us an idea of the number of parking spaces that we should request. Further information will be posted when we receive it.

We are in the process of arranging student memberships at the YMCA. As soon as the details are finalized a notice will be posted for sign up.

All students interested in Blue Cross-Blue Shield insurance should get their applications into the SBA office by October 1. For further information contact Jim deWindt.

If you have any questions or suggestions please feel free to stop by the SBA office. Our office hours are Mon.-Thurs. 12:00-1:00 and 5:00-6:00.

First Impressions: Try To Remember

When classes began this August, The Advocate asked four of its new first-year staff members to record their first impressions of our august institution. We offer them to you now to remind those just beginning here how short a time it's really been, and to remind those farther along of just how old they're getting.

For the first time in a long while, Labor Day Weekend meant just that. If I was back at the full-time job I had for the past two years, it would have been pure liesure time. Instead, it was a weekend of concentrated study sessions with a few reflective pauses in between.

The student orientation was an encouraging event. The general theme was "You'll work hard, but you'll get through, and it'll be worth it." I made up my mind not to be influenced by the upperclassmen's prejudices. Even so, I found my spirit dampened when I noticed that the sub-section of my section was the only group that had both of the professors a recent graduate had advised me to avoid—as if I had a choice about the matter.

Faculty orientation was not quite as encouraging. We were told by the Placement Director that she was truly heartened to see so many people still interested in pursuing law school educations, since we know there were jobs for only two-thirds of us. Going home on the subway that afternoon I sat next to a fellow reading Auto Mechanics Fundamentals, and I began to wonder . . .

By this time, evening conversation at home had taken on legal connotations. Did you willfully intend to step on my toe? Is your promise to take out the garbage enforceable? And at the dinner table, please pass the assault and pepper.

In class I notice the student on my left has written a brief longer than the case itself. The guy on my right is doing the New York Times crossword puzzle. And there is one student who I notice carries Trinity in her canvas bag every day. Is she really reading it?

As for me, for the time being at least, the situation will have to be no more devouring the Times, no more films. The only TV I'm planning on watching this year is Channel 13's re-enactment of Marbury v Madison on the 24th—and that's an assignment. But all in all, on the Seventh day of my first week, I looked back on the decision I had made to go to law school, and I saw that it was good.

- Law School is just like college except:
 - everyone pays attention in class
 - the aspirin dosage is stronger
 - what happened to the 3-day weekend?
- Law School is better than:
 - dissecting cadavers
 - unemployment
 - Eighth Avenue on a cloudy day
- The upperclassmen think:
 - they know it all
 - we know nothing
 - we're as masochistic as they
- All of my professors:
 - mentioned "The Paper Chase"
 - claimed Fordham was no paper chase
 - proceeded to call on us randomly, from their class lists
- One of my professors resembles:
 - Bob Newhart
 - Don Rickles
 - one of the Beach Boys
- Fear is:
 - in the heart of the beholder
 - in room 203
 - in the IND subway
- The combination to my locker is:
 - 6-24-56
 - 12-10-19
 - other. Please fill in: _ _ _ _
- In order to do well I intend to study:
 - 30 hours a day
 - 30 hours a day
 - 30 hours a day
- I used to be:

Of Basketball, Trumpets, and the Study of the Law

Welcome freshpersons and welcome back upperclasspeople (stalepersons?).

In your hands you hold the annual "welcome" edition of The Advocate. Our probable next issue, the annual "how to cope with finals/have a nice summer" edition will be available before you know it.

Many popular songs have what is commonly called a "hook," some catchy verse or instrumental passage which hopefully will make itself memorable, i.e., commercially successful, to the record buying public. But how desperate are the Trampps, a disco group of some renown, to have recorded a song called, "Body Contact Contrasts." Desperate enough apparently to have included in the song the unconscionable hook, "The party of the first part wants to party."

The following is reprinted without making any attempt to get permission from Bill Bradley's autobiography, "Life on the Run." A cocktail party conversation is in progress:

"Do you really like to play basketball?"

"Yeah, more than anything else I could be doing now," I reply.

"That's great. You know, I once played the trumpet . . . In my last year (at college) we had an offer to tour and make records. Everyone wanted to, except me."

"Why didn't you?"

"It just doesn't fit into a life plan. So, I went to law school and quit playing the trumpet, except every once in a while. Now I don't have the time."

"Do you like law?"

"It's okay, but nothing like playing the trumpet."

He should have joined up with the Trampps.

Letter:

Confusion

Dear Editor:

Since there is a sign in the cafeteria reading "SBA Pong" and no Pong machine, I would like to suggest that the student government place up similar signs all over the school. These signs could say "SBA Blackjack," "SBA Chess" or even "SBA Poker."

These new signs would produce as much fun, revenue and confusion as the original.

Sincerely,
"The Pinball Wizard"

Bad Bruce Sees 3B Triumph (Again)

Basketball Bits . . . Rumor has it that when and if 2E's franchise folds, Bill Maher will be signed by the 3B . . . Leroy Watkins 3B will be out three months recovering from a hernia operation so look for 3B to be vastly improved . . . Possible major trade in the works? Our sources say it will be little Peter Pizzi 3B to last year's champs 2A, for the astonishingly high waiver price of one dollar. Both parties to the action feel the deal will improve each team. Jim

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by Bruce Birns

Collins, coach of 2A, states: "Last year other teams could clog the middle against us." (As if it mattered, Jim. You guys only won every game by an average of 46 points.) "So we needed a fellow who could get the defense to come out a little further. Now we feel we have such a man. After seeing Pete play for 3B we feel we have a guy that's not afraid to shoot from fifty-five feet out. We're confident he'll raise his shooting percentage from 6.9%."

Bill Finger, coach of 3B, could add: "The move was one we had to make. Peter's moves on the court were a threat to the lives of our other players, and furthermore we needed a spot on the roster for our mascot."

ALL FORDHAM INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL TEAM 1976-1977

MARK GALLAGHER	2A	BILL MAHER	2E
JIM COLLINS	2A	BILL FINGER	3B
PAUL RENDICH	3A	MIKE KELLEY	2A*

* Mike Kelley originally was not named to the team for the following reasons:

1. He already received one miracle when he guessed on enough short answer questions correctly to be placed on law review. (Just in case you're wondering Mike, the group meets in room 201, that's the second floor, upstairs. bring paper and cil.)
2. He's got a sit back and relax attitude on the court, and thinks that defense is something that comes up somewhere in a trial.
3. But seriously, he's okay and deserves to make the list.)

FOOTBALL PREDICTIONS

Here is the way we The Advocate sees this year's exciting intramural football race:

1. 3A	PLAYOFFS
2. 2A	3A over 3B
3. 3B	3B over 2A
4. 2B
5. 1A	CHAMPIONSHIP
6. 1B	3B over 3A

3A: With Yale QB Kevin Rogan throwing to swift receiver John Gallagher of Williams and Tom Hurlhey, a product of the great Columbia Football program, this team should have the best offense in the league. The defense features Denny Chin one of the best linemen in the league and Terry Barnich at the safety. if the defense is solid they should win it all (if they ever schedule a game).

2A: They're big and strong—in fact they're bullies—but are they smart enough to go all the way? We here doubt it. Lost last year's championship by two points . . . Big lines, good QB in Dumoz. Adequate receiving in Garrett, Collins and Brown. Possible weakness is the secondary as evidenced in their first game where Mike Carey of 2B had a field day against Kelley (boy, you're not good in anything are you Mike?).

3B: After winning one game in their first two years this could be the year 3B, already 2-0 puts it all together. Jensen and Finger will share the QB duties. Boast fine receiving corps in Birns, that's me, Finger and long-threat Sheveland who caught three touchdowns last year. Strong line includes A.C.C. star Pete Hauspurg, Chuck Labella, Nick Karambelas and Richard Clifford.

2B: A dark horse. Their strength is in good cornerbacks, led by Calabresse, and a good leader in QB Dick Prentice who learned to throw in the wilderness of Hanover's woods (not much else to do, huh, Dick?). Receivers include elusive Mike Carey and a fine one in Biggert. They're in trouble if they have to throw long.

1A: Excellent players in Paul Sheils and Mike Murphy, who played at Brown. Their line is big but, as do all first year students, they lack organization. Bill Mehan could be a good cornerback but a potential disciplinary problem.

1B: Your guess is as good as ours.

Enroll NOW—save over $100!

It's not too early to think about the bar exam.

About 10,000 people will enroll in BRC's extraordinary bar review courses this year in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, California and a number of other states. Once you have investigated the various courses you will see why and, in all likelihood, you will be one of them. If you can look into the issue now and make your choice before October 31, 1977, there are a substantial number of "early bird benefits."

- SAVE $100. You may enroll in BRC's Programmed Learning System New York course for $225 — $100 less than the tuition after October 31. (Pennsylvania and New Jersey applicants save $75 on tuition.) A $10 deposit will freeze the discounted price for you.
- FREE USE OF OUTLINES. BRC 1978 Comprehensive Law Summaries are available now. Summer updated materials will be supplied when available at no extra charge. A $75 deposit is all that is necessary to get the books now.
- FREE DRY RUN COURSE. Enrollees for the Summer '78 course (or later) may attend any or all of BRC's Winter '78 lectures at no extra cost.
- CASH DISCOUNTS ON SUM AND SUBSTANCE. Early enrollees may purchase directly from BRC (by mail or at any office) Sum and Substance books and tapes at a substantial discount (10% on books, 20% on tapes). Limit one of each book or tape.
- FREE EARLY NEW YORK PRACTICE COURSE. Early enrollees may attend the Arthur Miller New York Practice course given in the Spring at no extra charge.
- FREE TRANSFERS. Should you decide to transfer your BRC enrollment to another state before April 1, 1978, you may do so at no extra charge.

Money, Money, Who's Got the Money: SBA Treasurer Reports

The attached report and supporting schedules cover the period from 2/10/77 to 9/6/77 inclusive. Cash Assets at the end of the period totaled $12,494.26 after an accrual of $1,333.48 for bills payable. In addition, it is recommended that a reserve of $1,700 be established for class stipends as they become payable. Such a reserve would insure against over allocation that might impair these funds. Should this recommendation be approved, net cash assets would then total $10,794.26.

public and municipal finance. His practice included representing the Municipal Assistance Corporation as bond counsel, and the Museum of Modern Art in drafting legislation for the Trust for Cultural Resources Programs.

According to Harper, "My primary desire is to teach urban law at Fordham. I hope to make a substantial contribution in teaching and research in that field."

He will teach Municipal Corporations this spring.

A 33-year-old native New Yorker, Harper had favorable first impressions of Fordham.

"I think the students are energetic and enthusiastic," he said. "I'd like to get to know as many of them as possible."

The third new teacher is Professor Gail Hollister, who was profiled in The Advocate last April. Hollister comes to Fordham from the legal department of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, where she specialized in securities regulation.

Now teaching two sections of torts, Hollister plans to make a career of teaching.

School approximately 80% of those graduates had accepted legal positions by the end of the summer following their graduation. While starting salaries ranged from a low of $10,000 for law clerks in some judicial systems to a high of $22,000 in large New York law firms, the Placement Director calculated the average starting salary in 1974 to be $15,784, $16,488 in 1975 and $19,060 in 1976.

Overall, Walters believes that the Placement Office's services are not being fully utilized by students who may need them the most. The philosophy of the Placement Office, she says, is to serve all the students and not just the top few.
