Dear Rep. Ferraro,

In October, Avon Books is publishing THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER, a novel for young readers by Ellen Emerson White.

The story, told from the perspective of sixteen year old Meghan Powers, tells of Meghan's mother's successful campaign for the Presidency. When the author first proposed this subject, some people felt the premise was so unlikely the book wouldn't be believable--underestimating not only Ellen Emerson White's talent, but the progress of American politics. Obviously, the idea that a woman might run for President and win isn't that far-fetched at all.

I suspect you'll have very little time for recreational reading in the next few months, but if you do find yourself with a few spare hours, I think you'll find THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER entertaining -- and timely -- reading.

Sincerely,

Ellen E. Krieger
