Gilpatric, J.:

Petitioner commenced this CPLR Article 78 proceeding seeking review of the determination by the New York State Board of Parole ("Parole Board" or "Board") on April 25, 2022 that denied his application for discretionary parole release. Respondent has answered the petition and request the petition be denied and the matter dismissed in its entirety.

Petitioner was convicted of Murder in the second degree and sentenced 25 years to Life, Robbery in the first degree and sentenced to an indeterminate term of 6 to 18 years, and Criminal Possession of a Weapon in the second degree and sentenced to an indeterminate term of 4 to 12 years (Answer, Exhibit "A"). The sentencing court ordered the sentences for Murder in the second degree and Robbery in the first degree to run consecutively to each other and the sentence for Criminal Possession of a Weapon in the second degree to run concurrent with the first two sentences (Answer, Exhibit "A"). Petitioner appeared before the Board of Parole for his initial appearance on April 12, 2022 and was denied discretionary release on April 25, 2022 (Answer, Exhibit "E" and "F"). Petitioner administratively appealed on August 12, 2022 and the Appeals Units issued its decision affirming the Parole Board's determination on November 8, 2022 (Answer, Exhibit "G" and "H"). Petitioner then commenced this action.

Petitioner argues, inter alia, that the Board of Parole: 1) focused on the instant offense; 2) departed from the low risk COMPAS score; 3) mischaracterized his expression of remorse; 4) mischaracterized his mental health; 5) mischaracterized the letter from the District Attorney; and 6) the record does not contain any indication that his release is incompatible with the welfare of society. He argues that these alleged failures by the Respondent entitles him to a de novo parole board interview (Petition).

In 2011, Executive Law § 259-c (4) was amended to require the Parole Board to "establish written procedures for its use in making parole decisions as required by law," and provides that "[s]uch written procedures shall incorporate risk and needs principles to measure the rehabilitation of persons appearing before the board [and] the likelihood of success of such persons upon release, and assist members of the state board of parole in determining which inmates may be released to parole supervision" (L. 2011, ch. 62, part C, sub-part A, § 38-b). In addition, Executive Law § 259-i (1) was repealed, and Executive Law § 259-i (2) (c) was amended to consolidate into one section the complete list of factors that the Parole Board is required to consider in reviewing applications for discretionary parole release (id., §§ 38-f; 38-f-1). However, the latter amendment did not result in a substantive change in the criteria which the Parole Board should consider in making its determination.

As it stands now and as relevant here, Executive Law § 259-i (2) (c) (A) provides:

Discretionary release on parole shall not be granted merely as a reward for good conduct or efficient performance of duties while confined but after considering if there is a reasonable probability that, if such inmate is released, he will live and remain at liberty without violating the law, and that his release is not incompatible with the welfare of society and will not so deprecate the seriousness of his crime as to undermine respect for law. In making the parole release decision, the procedures adopted pursuant to [Executive Law § 259-c (4)] shall require that the following be considered: (i) the institutional record including program goals and accomplishments, academic achievements, vocational education, training or work assignments, therapy and interactions with staff and inmates; . . . (iii) release plans including community resources, employment, education and training and support services available to the inmate; . . . (v) any statement made to the board by the crime victim or the victim's representative, where the crime victim is deceased or is mentally or physically incapacitated; . . . (vii) the seriousness of the offense with due consideration to the type of sentence, length of sentence and recommendations of the sentencing court, the district attorney, the attorney for the inmate, the pre-sentence probation report as well as consideration of any mitigating and aggravating factors, and activities following arrest prior to confinement; and (viii) prior criminal record, including the nature and pattern of offenses, adjustment to any previous probation or parole supervision and institutional confinement. . . .

Further, settled law holds: “[P]arole release decisions are discretionary and will not be disturbed so long as the Board complied with the statutory requirements of Executive Law § 259-1” (Molinar v New York State Div. of Parole, 119 AD3d 1214 [3rd Dept 2014]; Matter of Tafari v Evans, 102 AD3d 1053, 1053 [3d Dept 2013]; lv denied 21 NY3d 852).

The essence of petitioner's argument is that the Board failed to consider all the necessary statutory factors, instead only focusing on the instant offense and petitioner's criminal record. Mixed with this argument is petitioner's claim that the Board did not give serious consideration to the COMPAS Risk and Needs Assessment. Petitioner contends that, had it seriously considered this instrument, the Board could not have come to the conclusion it did, arguing that this demonstrates that the Board's determination is arbitrary and capricious.

Contrary to petitioner's view, and after the Court's review of all of the submissions, the record establishes that the Board “incorporate[d] risk and needs principles to measure the rehabilitation” of petitioner in his appearance before it (L. 2011, ch. 62, part C, sub-part A, § 38-b). The submissions indicate that the Board had for its review a copy of the petitioner's COMPAS Re-entry Risk Assessment, his Case Plan, the sentencing minutes and official opposition along with considering has institutional adjustment (Matter of Garfield v Evans, 108 AD3d 830, 830-831 [3d Dept 2013]).

As outlined above and as evident in the record before it, the Board did consider the relevant factors. After reviewing all of the records, the Board felt that petitioner's release would be incompatible with the welfare of society. For instance, in addition to the serious nature of the underlying crime, the Board considered the petitioner's sentencing minutes, and petitioner's course of conduct both during and after the commission of the crimes (see Matter of Maricevic, 86 AD3d at 880; Matter of Motti v Alexander, 54 AD3d 1114, 1115 [3d Dept 2008]). Also, the Board is not required to articulate in its determination every factor it considered (see Matter of Vaughn v Evans, 98 AD3d 1158, 1160 [3d Dept 2012]; Matter of Rodriguez v Board of Parole, 100 AD3d 1179, 1180 [3d Dept 2012]; see Matter of Maricevic v Evans, 86 AD3d 879, 880 [3d Dept 2011]).

Given the foregoing, the Court has considered any remaining contentions and need not address them.

Accordingly, it is, ORDERED and ADJUDGED that the Article 78 petition is denied; and the petition is dismissed.

This shall constitute the Decision and Order of the Court. Counsel is not relieved from the applicable provisions of that rule regarding notice of entry.

SO ORDERED.
