LL.M PERSPECTIVES

A NEW PERSPECTIVE

The Volume 27 Board of the Fordham International Law Journal ("ILJ") is proud to introduce a new segment we have entitled LL.M Perspectives. The Fordham Master of Laws program ("LL.M") is now in its fourteenth year and has hosted scholars and professionals from over seventy-five countries. In that time, ILJ has sought to strengthen its bond with the LL.M program through its recruitment of International Graduate Fellows. Each year, ILJ chooses six to seven students from the LL.M program to join its team. The diverse expertise these students have brought, along with their refreshing perspectives on our own law, have been an invaluable contribution to the quality and culture of the Journal.

This new segment features authors taken from Fordham LL.M students, both current and graduates, who have written exceptional pieces on current and comparative international issues. As both telescope and mirror, the pieces in this segment provide a unique insight into the legal priorities and concerns of legal communities, who, regardless of distance, are not that far abroad.
