DEAN JOSEPH R. CROWLEY

Alpin J. Cameron Professor of Law

JOSEPH R. Crowley was a dearly valued member of the legal community and particularly the Fordham Law School community. He graduated from Fordham University School of Law in 1948 and embarked on an illustrious legal career. In 1957, he was appointed to the faculty of the Law School, where he quickly became the favorite of student and faculty alike, and went on to shape one of the nation's finest labor law programs. He later received the Keefe Award for outstanding contributions to the school and was honored as Cameron Professor of Law. Eventually, he was appointed Associate Dean of the Law School. As Dean, he was a trusted and beloved advisor to administrators, faculty members and especially students. An active and respected labor lawyer, Dean Crowley served on such distinguished bodies as the Employee Relations Panel of the Port Authority, of which he was Chairman, and the New York State Public Employees Relations Board, of which he was a founding member. Joseph Crowley was a special man who deeply touched those who were close to him. The following pages contain some thoughts of people who knew him well.
