Dear Mr. Feerick:

My thanks for your thoughtfulness in sending me a copy of your Fordham Law Review article on "Presidential Inability."

You have done an excellent job of listing historical background and analyzing the elements of the complex problem and, as you know, I share your view that this problem simply must be met. Frankly, however, the political and personal factors which often surround a Vice President are such that I doubt the practicability of permitting the Vice President to make the inability determination.

I am, of course, retaining your article for my personal file on this complex and intriguing subject.

Sincerely yours,

Howard W. Robison
