Fordham's Not a Gay Place

[An] homosexual is, after all, a human being and a citizen of the U.S., despite the fact that he finds his sex gratification in what must consider to be an unconventional manner. Who cares about civil rights and human dignity, not just the gays among us. Indeed, at Fordham, not only is the issue of gay rights avoided, but the very existence of homosexuals, after all, a human being and a citizen of the U.S., is denied.

DIRECTIONS: There are 40 "yes" - "no" questions, worth a total of 20 points, to this part of the examination. The questions are intended as inquiries into your fundamental knowledge of Evidence. Do not search for hidden meanings or remote exceptions as none are intended. Assume wherever necessary that timely objection to the evidence is made. Answer according to New York law, unless otherwise indicated.

DO NOT write your answers on this sheet. Answer all questions on the attached answer sheet by writing "yes" or "no" in the space provided. Unless the question is answered as indicated, it will be counted as unanswered; and an unanswered question will be counted as a wrong answer.

We regret to inform you that, due to the limited number of openings and the limited time available for interviews, we are unable to invite you to our office for further interviews. However, we will retain your resume and will contact you if our situation changes.

We enjoyed meeting with you and thank you for your interest in joining us.

The Fordham Law School Class of 1981 cordially invites you to its

SBA Reports: Nickels, Dimes, and Freeloaders

SBA President Bob Patterson, recovering from the combined effects of a near-miss Tang, hearing testimony that he sunk Binghamton's, and a $42 bill for his Stein dinner tax, could not write this month's SBA report. Though Bob is a hard man to track down (as President, he has classes three days a week), we did catch him for a phone interview. Shouting above what sounded very much like a fussball machine, Bob lashed out at unfounded rumors, and told us a thing or two about the SBA. The following excerpts are from the interview.

International Law Forum: Number Three, But Growing

by Kevin Hofman

Over the past few years, a third literary organization has taken root alongside Fordham's two established journals (Law Review and Urban Law Journal). The new kid in town is the International Law Forum (ILF). The level of activity has grown by leaps and bounds. The forum has sponsored several notable events, including a cabaret called "Old Chum," which featured singers, dancers, actors, and comedians. The cabaret was a success, proving that lawyers-to-be can dance free! The forum continues to flourish, with a growing membership and a diverse array of activities. So, whether you're interested in international law or just looking for a good time, the International Law Forum is a must-see!
