IT WAS A TIME OF HOPE . . .

University President Rev. James Finlay, S.J. speaking at the ceremonies.

Students en masse observing the occasion.
Fordham Law School was the first building erected on the Lincoln Center Campus and opened its doors to students twenty-two years ago. Official groundbreaking ceremonies for the new wing being added to Fordham Law's Schools existing structure were held on Wednesday, September 28, 1983.

The Law construction, the single biggest investment at Fordham in the last fifteen years, will nearly double the Law School's present space. The law school was built expeditiously, if not hastily, in an effort to avoid legal disputes concerning the land (acquired through urban renewal) was to be used. The project could not have been postponed any longer due to the lack of sufficient space at the present site to adequately accommodate the current population.

The original building, which was built in 1961, was designed to house a student population of 650 and a faculty of 27. The current enrollment is approximately 1200 students who are studying under 100 full and part-time faculty members.

The major facilities in the new wing will include a 256-seat amphitheater, two 140-seated tiered lecture halls and a new cafeteria that can accommodate 275 students. The new structure will double the school's library capacity while providing space for a computer center and other technological study aids. Reconfiguration of classrooms and offices will also allow for new faculty offices, seminar rooms and the expansion of the admission and placement offices and other student facilities.

DEAN JOHN D. FEERICK
Message from John D. Feerick

On behalf of the faculty and administration of Fordham Law School, I extend to you our farewell and best wishes as you approach your life as a lawyer.

This yearbook forever will be a reminder of shared moments of challenge, learning, achievement, and happiness. It captures an important period in your life. It has been a privilege and a pleasure for the faculty and administration of the Law School to have been part of this experience.

The talents you have developed and the values which have matured during your law school career will serve you well and be with you always. I know you will represent our School in the legal profession with a professionalism and a standard of integrity that will be a source of pride to you and your teachers.

I invite you to come back frequently to the Law School. For my part, I hope the School will continue to be a source of inspiration to you as you pursue your professional life. I look forward to our continued friendship in the future.

John D. Feerick

R.J. Partner, Esq.

New York, New York 10004

Dear Mr. Partner:

I want to thank your firm for the time you spent interviewing me and the interest you showed in me by giving me an offer of employment.

I have now carefully reviewed the offers given me in recent weeks in an effort to apprise each firm of its standing as quickly as possible, and regret to inform you that I am unable to give you an encouragement at this time. This decision was a very difficult one for me to reach due to the limited number of firms at which I can accept employment, I am unable to accept offers from each firm at which I might like to work.

I wish your firm all the success in its future recruitment and will keep resume on file in case my situation should change.

Very truly yours,

Susan Law Student

SOME PROFESSORS TALKING

After a day of classes
At Dear Old Fordham
I went to the Pub
To escape from the boredom.

To my surprise
As I concluded walking
I looked into the Pub
And saw some professors talking.

Marcus and Abramovksy
Were talking crime,
Abe smoking cigarettes
Three at a time.

"The Supreme Court's too liberal,"
Hugh Hansen moaned.
"Nonsense, they're fascists,"
Dan Capra intoned.

Calamari and Perillo
Strode around proud
"We're making a fortune,"
They shouted out loud.

While Byrn and Phillips
Stood laughing by the door,
"We've never given a grade
Over 74!"

Mike Madison, as always,
Was the picture of serenity,
While Fogelman told the bartender
"I once knew John Kennedy."

In the corner crying
Stood Sharpe, Schmudde and Katsoris.
"Drinks are not a deduction!"
Had said the bartender Morris.

Hollister, looking pale, said
"I'm gonna be ill."
"Not yet," McGonagle screamed,
"Let me draw up your will."

'I'll jump," said O'Connor
As he pointed to a tower,
"They just cut New York Practice
A whole 'nother hour."

Chiang helped McLaughlin
Stagger to the door.
"I'm dying, Egypt," cried Jerry
As he fell to the floor.

"Planes and ships, I love 'em,"
Sweeney explained.
"We have neither in Iowa"
Mike Martin complained.

Sims turned to Van den Haag
"What do you call entertainment?"
To which the latter replied,
"A nice long arraignment."

Magnetti was bragging
About his trip to Iran.
"Who cares?" said Vairo,
"They have no Pac-Man."

It had reached three a.m.
It was time to go.
I turned to the bartender
"That's the end of the show."

He then informed me
Of an overheard admission
"To pay for this party,
They raised your tuition!"

The year 1984 marks the 10th anniversary of the creation of Biblio Juris-the Fordham Law School Bookstore. In 1974, Biblio Juris, Inc. was incorporated under section 402 of the Not-for-Profit Corporation Law.

Biblio Juris provides within the law school a convenient location where students can purchase required casebooks, texts and statutes at the lowest economically feasible price. According to statute and the certificate of incorporation, Biblio Juris must distribute all funds in excess of actual operating capital and reasonable and necessary expenses to the school for the benefit of the law students. Last year Biblio Juris donated the word processor/computer to the Placement Center.

We started with a belief. We began with a hope. We believed that it was worthwhile for our law school to have a yearbook. We hoped that our creation would be enjoyed by our fellow students, their families, the professors, and the law school administration and staff.

The Yearbook serves two purposes: Today and Tomorrow. Use the book today to connect names with faces and faces with names. Use it tomorrow to laugh at what "we" looked like. "Remember him?"; "I wonder what ever happened to . . ."; "Oh, so that's what her name was . . ." These are some of the questions and statements that this yearbook will initiate.

The creation of the Yearbook was not a simple venture. (We now stretch our arms to pat ourselves on the back). Let me add that the appearance of "Co-Editor: Law School Yearbook" on our resumes has not caused the U.S. Supreme Court Justices to come running to us to serve as law clerks. No matter; it was worth the effort. Enjoy.

If we never talked about torts over coffee, if we never sat in the same classroom, if we never walked the same hallway together, let us feel united in our completion of law school.

Let us look forward to our lives as lawyers.
Let us look forward to our lives.

"Each lawyer must find within his own conscience the touchstone against which to test the extent to which his actions should rise above minimum standards. But in the last analysis it is the desire for the respect and confidence of the members of his profession and of the society which he serves that should provide to a lawyer the incentive for the highest possible degree of ethical conduct."
